TRUCK PLOWS INTO CROWD AT BERLIN MARKET, NINE DEAD

A truck plowed into a crowded Christmas market in the German capital Berlin on Monday evening, killing nine people and injuring up to 50 others. German media, citing police at the scene, said first indications pointed to an attack on the market, situated at the foot of the ruined Kaiser Wilhelm memorial church, which was kept as a bombed-out ruin after World War II. The attack was claimed by Islamic State. The truck careened into the Berlin market at what would have been one of the most crowded times for the Christmas market, when adults and children would be gathering in the traditional cluster of wooden huts that sell food and Christmas goods. Berlin police said nine people were killed. REUTERS

NC SIGNALS REVERSAL ON TRANSGENDER BATHROOM LAW

North Carolina's governor-elect said a deal could soon bring the repeal of a state law limiting bathroom access for transgender people, following nine months of economic boycotts and protests over legislation protested as discriminatory. Under the law adopted in March, North Carolina was the first U.S. state to ban transgender people from using government-run restrooms that match their gender identity. The law, which catapulted the state to the forefront of U.S. culture wars over LGBT rights, has been blamed for hundreds of millions of dollars in economic losses and the relocation of major sporting events. In a surprise development, incoming Gov. Roy Cooper, a Democrat, said on Monday that Republican legislative leaders agreed to call a special session as soon as Tuesday to repeal the law, known as House Bill (H.B.) 2. REUTERS

US SEES CHINA RETURNING DRONE AS EARLY AS TUESDAY

The United States expects China to soon return an underwater U.S. drone after a Chinese naval vessel seized it last week, with one U.S. official telling Reuters the exchange could happen as early as Tuesday at an agreed spot in the South China Sea. China's seizure of the unmanned underwater vehicle (UUV) triggered a diplomatic protest and speculation about whether U.S. President-elect Donald Trump will point to the incident as proof of the need to take a tougher line with Beijing. A Chinese warship took the drone, which the Pentagon says uses unclassified, commercially available technology to collect oceanographic data, on Thursday about 50 nautical miles northwest of Subic Bay in the Philippines. REUTERS

As Electoral College votes, anti-Trump activists rally

The crowd outside the State House urged electors not to vote for Donald Trump.

As the Electoral College voted Monday to award Donald Trump the presidency, scores of opponents assembled at state capitals throughout the country with the hopes of urging them to break ranks and either abstain or vote for a different candidate.

By late afternoon, protesters wrestled with their disappointment. The Associated Press reported that Trump had officially gained the 270 electoral votes necessary to win the presidency.

In Boston, anti-Trump protesters rallied at the Massachusetts State House to add their voice to the opposition. The state had overwhelmingly voted for Democrat Hillary Clinton in the election.

A crowd of about 200 people gathered in front of the State House steps and chanted, "It's unprecedented but we must un-president him," and, "See that freedom trail? Electors do not fail."

The 538 members of the Electoral College were expected to cast their votes in accordance with the popular vote of their state. It was anticipated that Trump would easily surpass the 270 electoral votes needed to win the presidency.

To deny Trump the Oval Office, 37 Republican electors would have had to abstain or vote for a candidate other than Trump.

Participants in Boston said it was important to show unity with like-minded protesters across the country. Clinton took Massachusetts with 61 percent of the vote, com-

"Now more than ever, when our current president-elect is trying to attack all our basic rights — even the right to peacefully assemble — it's more important for us to exercise those rights," said Jenny O., a performance artist and mother who would not give her last name.

Renaldo Pearson, a Harvard administrator and activist, acknowledged to the crowd that his allegiances in the presidential primary had been for Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders. But that fight was long over, he added.

"This is not about Hillary Clinton or Bernie Sanders," he said through a megaphone. "It's about democracy."

Pearson told the crowd that he once participated in a march from Philadelphia to Washington to "call attention to money in politics." The core issues, he said, are voter suppression and the need for campaign reform.

Boston-area cab companies sue Uber

The cabbies argue that Uber is allowed to operate under less stringent regulations than taxis.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Taxi cab drivers have long been at odds with ride-hailing services that seem to have taken over city transportation.

The rivalry is escalating. More than 30 Boston-area cab companies have filed a lawsuit against Uber, alleging that the company aims to be a monopoly thanks to its "predatory pricing."

It also argues that taxi drivers have worked hard to comply with state laws while Uber is violating those laws and deceiving customers.

The lawsuit, filed on Friday, names Gov. Charlie Baker as a defendant as well. The cab companies argue that the commonwealth has violated their constitutional rights because a recent state law exempts "Transportation Network Companies," such as Uber and Lyft, from the same city and town regulations that govern the taxi industry.

This means that the taxi companies and ride-hailing services, which are direct competitors, are "being regulated by different government bodies in an entirely unequal way," the lawsuit argues.

Baker signed the bill into law on Aug. 5. It requires ride-hailing companies to pay a 20-cent fee per ride. It also requires background checks on all drivers.

"Gov. Baker, in collaboration with the legislature, was pleased to sign legislation establishing a regulatory framework for transportation network companies, that didn't previously exist and prioritizes public safety including some of the strongest ride-for-hire background check systems in the nation," said Billy Pitman, press secretary for Baker's office, when asked about the lawsuit.

The office did not comment on the pending litigation. Uber did not provide an official comment on the lawsuit either, but a representative noted that a similar case occurred in Chicago.

There, a federal appeals court ruled that the city could apply different regulations to services like Uber and Lyft than it does to taxis, according to The Boston Globe.

"Here's an analogy: Most cities and towns require dogs but not cats to be licensed ... there are differences between the animals," the judge wrote in that decision. "Just as some people prefer cats to dogs, some people prefer Uber to Yellow Cab, Flash Cab, Checker Cab, et al. They prefer one business model to another."

Laundromat sparked Charlestown house fire that displaced 20

A fire that displaced up to 20 people in a multi-family home in Charlestown was caused by an electric short-circuit in the building's ground floor laundromat, according to investigators.

Fire officials told local news media that Friday's blaze began in the ceiling of Monument Laundromat, at 144 Bunker Hill St.

The 6:45 a.m. fire on a particularly frigid morning in Boston sent fire trucks racing to the scene. Thick smoke billowed from the windows of the three-story home, and immediately formed on fire trucks and ladders. Temperatures were a bone-chilling 2 degrees that morning.

The American Red Cross was on scene to assist displaced residents, at first believed to be six but later determined to be as many as 20. No one was injured.

Monument Laundromat had a cameo appearance in the Boston-based thriller "The Town," starring Ben Affleck.

Boston Mayor Marty Walsh was also on the scene at the time firefighters were battling the blaze. ALEXI FRIEDMAN

Tips to prepare your pets for winter

Outdoor exercise is good for pets no matter the season, but experts say snow and ice isn't always a winter wonderland for man's best friend.

When the temperatures dip, pets — just like their human companions — need to bundle up. Pets can suffer from hypothermia and frostbite. Owners should also be on the lookout for common hazards, such as road salt and toxins from antifreeze that can pose a threat to the health and safety of your furry friends.

"There are a lot of things specific to urban areas when you're out walking your pets," said Michael San Filippo, senior media relations specialist with the American Veterinary Medical Association.

In cities, dogs tend to run into a lot of de-icer and have more potential to come into contact with antifreeze, which can cause paw irritation or abrasions.

These are some of the most common winter weather injuries critical

Russian ambassador to Turkey shot dead in Ankara art gallery

The attacker was smartly dressed in black suit and tie and stood, alone, behind the ambassador as he made a speech at the art exhibition.

The Russian ambassador to Turkey was shot in the back and killed as he gave a speech at an Ankara art gallery on Monday by an off-duty police officer who shouted "Don't forget Aleppo" and "Allahu Akbar" as he opened fire.

The Russian foreign ministry confirmed the death of envoy Andrei Karlov, calling it a "terrorist act." Relations between Moscow and Ankara have long been strained over the conflict in Syria, with the two support opposing sides in the war.

Russia is an ally of Syrian President Bashar al-Assad and its airstrikes helped Syrian forces end rebel resistance last week in the northern city of Aleppo. Turkey, which seeks Assad's ouster, has been repairing ties with Moscow after shooting down a Russian warplane over Syria last year.

The Ankara mayor said on Twitter the gunman as a 22-year-old police officer. Two security sources told Reuters he was not on duty at the time.

"He took out his gun and shot the ambassador from behind. We saw him lying on the floor and then we ran out," said the witness, who asked not to be identified. People took refuge in adjoining rooms as the shooting continued.

A video showed the attacker shouting: "Don't forget Aleppo, don't forget Syria!"

get Syria!" and "Allahu Akbar [God is Greatest]" as screams rang out. He paced about and shouted as he held the gun in one hand and waved the other in the air.

A Reuters cameraman at the scene said gunfire rang out for some time after the attack. Turkey's Anadolu news agency said the gunman had been "neutralized," apparently killed.

parently killed.

Another photograph showed four people the ambassador lying on the floor.

"We regard this as a terrorist act," said Russian Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Maria Zakharova. "Terrorism will not win and we will fight against it decisively."

It was not clear whether the gunman was a lone operator, driven perhaps by popular discontent over Russian action in Syria or affiliated to a group like Islamic State, which has carried out a string of bomb attacks in Turkey in the last year.

Since a failed coup in July, President Tayyip Erdogan has been purging the police of supporters of an exiled cleric and former ally, Fethullah Gulen, whom he characterizes as the chief terrorist threat to Turkey. REUTERS

BRIEF

MBTA, Carmen's Union agree to contract running through June 2021

The MBTA and its largest union have come to terms on a new contract, one that T officials say will save the system an annual average of $22 million over the next decade, and that the union chief said will protect his members' jobs and will improve their quality of life.

While the T and the Carmen's Union Local 589 have clashed this year over privatization efforts, the revised and extended contract eliminates the possibility of the T outsourcing the work of driving buses or operating trains on the T's current system, both sides said.

Carmen's Union members currently operate 2.4 million revenue hours of T service each year, and the new contract guarantees that union members will continue to operate 2.4 million revenue hours on the T. The union, though, will forgo a planned 2.5 percent pay raise next year and will instead see wages held flat in fiscal year 2018.

The agreement, which revises the contract that had been in place and extends it through June 2021, was ratified Sunday by the union and T officials presented it to the T's Fiscal and Management Control Board on Monday afternoon. STATE HOUSE NEWS SERVICE

New Male Potency Formula Makes "The Little Blue Pill" Obsolete

Soaring demand expected for new scientific advance made just for older men. Works on both men's physical ability and their desire in bed.

By Harlan S. Waxman
Health News Syndicate

New York – If you're like the rest of us guys over 50; you probably already know the truth... Prescription ED pills don't work! Simply getting an erection doesn't fix the problem" says Dr. Bassam Damaj, chief scientific officer at the world famous Innovus Pharma Laboratories.

As we get older, we need more help in bed. Not only does our desire fade; but erections can be soft or feeble, one of the main complaints with prescription pills. Besides, they're expensive... costing as much as $50.00 each

Plus, it does nothing to stimulate your brain to want sex. "I don't care what you take, if you aren't interested in sex, you can't get or keep an erection. It's physiologically impossible," said Dr. Damaj.

MADE JUST FOR MEN OVER 50

But now, for the first time ever, there's a pill made just for older men. It's called Vesele®. A new pill that helps you get an erection by stimulating your body and your brainwaves. So Vesele® can work even when nothing else worked before.

The new men's pill is not a drug. It's something completely different Because you don't need a prescription for Vesele®, sales are exploding. The maker just can't produce enough of it to keep up with demand. Even doctors are having a tough time getting their hands on it. So what's all the fuss about?

JAW-DROPPING CLINICAL PROOF

|--------------------------|----------|--------|
| Satisfaction | 41.4% | 88.1% |
| Frequency | 44.9% | 79.5% |
| Desire | 47.9% | 82% |
| Hardness | 36.2% | 85.7% |
| Duration | 35% | 79.5% |
| Ability to Satisfy | 44.1% | 83.3% |

WORKS ON YOUR HEAD AND YOUR BODY

The new formula takes on erectile problems with a whole new twist. It doesn't just address the physical problems of getting older; it works on the mental part of sex too. Unlike the expensive prescriptions, the new pill stimulates your sexual brain chemistry as well. Actually helping you regain the passion and burning desire you had for your partner again. So you will want sex with the hunger and stamina of a 25-year-old.

THE BRAIN/ERECTION CONNECTION

Vesele takes off where Viagra® only begins. Thanks to a discovery made by 3 Nobel-Prize winning scientists; Vesele® has become the first ever patented supplement to harden you and your libido. So you regain your desire as well as the ability to act on it.

In a 16-week clinical study; scientists from the U.S.A. joined forces to prove Nitric Oxide's effects on the cardio vascular system. They showed that Nitric Oxide could not only increase your ability to get an erection, it would also work on your brainwaves to stimulate your desire for sex. The results were remarkable and published in the world's most respected medical journals.

THE SCIENCE OF SEX

The study asked men, 45 to 65 years old to take the main ingredient in Vesele® once a day. Then they were instructed not to change the way they eat or exercise but to take Vesele® twice a day. What happened next was remarkable. Virtually every man in the study who took Vesele® twice a day reported a huge difference in their desire for sex. In layman's terms, they were horny again. They also experienced harder erections that lasted for almost 20 minutes. The placebo controlled group (who received sugar pills) mostly saw no difference.

AN UNEXPECTED BONUS: The study results even showed an impressive increase in the energy, brain-power and memory of the participants.

SUPPLY LIMITED BY OVERWHELMING DEMAND

"Once we saw the results we knew we had a game-changer said Dr. Damaj. We get hundreds of calls a day from people begging us for a bottle. It's been crazy. We try to meet the crushing demand for Vesele®."

DOCTOR: "VESELE® PASSED THE TEST"

"As a doctor, I've studied the effectiveness of Nitric Oxide on the body and the brain. I'm impressed by the way it increases cerebral and penile blood flow. The result is evident in the creation of Vesele®. It's sure-fire proof that the mind/body connection is unbeatable when achieving and maintaining an erection and the results are remarkable" said Dr. Damaj.

New men's pill overwhelms your senses with sexual desire as well as firmer, long-lasting erections. There's never been anything like it before.

HERE'S WHAT MEN ARE SAYING

- I'm ready to go sexually and mentally.
- More frequent erections in the night (while sleeping) and in the morning.
- I have seen a change in sexual desire.
- Typically take 1 each morning and 1 each night. Great stamina results!
- An increased intensity in orgasms.
- My focus (mental) has really improved... Huge improvement.
- Amazing orgasms!
- I really did notice a great improvement in my ability.

HOW TO GET VESELE®

This is the first official public release of Vesele® since its news release. In order to get the word out about Vesele®, Innovus Pharma is offering special introductory discounts to all who call.

A special phone hotline has been set up for readers in your area; to take advantage of special discounts during this ordering opportunity. Special discounts will be available starting today at 6:00am. The discounts will automatically be applied to all callers. Camila Cabello leaves Fifth Harmony

You would think performing with a group of your peers might make the pressures of the fast-paced, competitive music industry easier to deal with. But apparently the opposite is true, given that so many pop bands have a hard time sticking together. Last year, Zayn Malik left the hugely popular One Direction. And now their female counterparts, Fifth Harmony, are facing a similar plight. On Monday, the group announced that after four-and-a-half years together, Camila Cabello has left the group. According to their statement, Camila's reps gave the notice. Does this mean there is some behind-the-scenes drama? Probably. At least Fourth Harmony has a similar ring to it.

Katie Holmes and Jamie Foxx do Cabo

Jamie Foxx and Katie Holmes might be the most elusive couple in Hollywood. We have a better chance of finding Kim Kardashian's robbers than we do getting a decent picture of these two together. But we never stop watching and listening, hoping to get a scrap of info that confirms the relationship that blindsided us all. We got lucky this weekend: Us Weekly reports Foxx and Holmes took a private jet to Cabo San Lucas, Mexico, to celebrate her 38th birthday Friday. They stayed in a remote suite at the Las Ventanas al Paraíso and even had a personal butler during. Discretion was paramount, so the couple came and went via a separate entrance. They returned to the States the following day and presumably got back to pretending not to know each other. Holmes did post pictures with her adorable younger doppelganger, Suri Cruise. But we know a distraction when we see one, Katie.

Mariah Carey doesn't know Ariana Grande or Demi Lovato

Mariah Carey is known to be a diva, and a shady one at that. She completely transformed the meaning of the phrase: "I don't know her." After using it in reference to Jennifer Lopez years ago, it became MiMi's calling card. So when Andy Cohen invited Mariah to "Watch What Happens Live," they played a game of "Do You Know Her?" and there were some casualties. She still doesn't know J. Lo, and doesn't know Ariana Grande, either. Cohen also asked Mariah about Demi Lovato's tweet over the summer in which she accused Mariah of being "nasty" to J.Lo. She replied, "I don't

Khloe Kardashian's boyfriend had a baby last week

Khloe Kardashian has kept things pretty low-key with her new boyfriend, Tristan Thompson. And unlike other suitors who get caught up in the Kardashian web, there hasn't been a ton of press coverage about Thompson, his career (he plays for the Cleveland Cavaliers) or their relationship. All we know is that a pregnant girlfriend, Jordan Craig, was left in the dust when Khloe and Tristan made it official.

Craig is the cousin of Kevin Hart's wife, Eniko Parrish. Small world. Anyway, Us Weekly is now reporting that Craig quietly gave birth to a baby boy last week. While neither parent has shared pictures of their newborn son, Khloe posted a picture of her and bae. It's safe to say that she's unbothered by the new addition to Thompson's family. But then again, what's a little scandal to a Kardashian?

Paris Jackson gives Macaulay Culkin a pedicure

We can imagine that being Michael Jackson's daughter has supplied Paris Jackson with some strange stories. Not only was her late father the King of Pop, he had a private amusement park at his home and liked to climb trees even as an adult. If you have your pick of who to talk to at a dinner party, Paris should have some really amazing material for a round of Two Truths and a Lie. For example, "I painted the toes of the kid from 'Home Alone'" is a truth. In a photo posted on the 18-year-old's Instagram account over the weekend, Paris is seen putting red polish on now-36-year-old Macaulay Culkin's toenails. He wasn't just stopping by for a salon appointment — Culkin was close friends with Michael Jackson and is Paris' godfather. In the picture's caption, Paris calls her godfather a "hipster." But he's not too low-maintenance for a pedi.

Emma Stone nerds out over musicals

The Oscar nominee talks about "La La Land" and getting horribly sick on Broadway.

matt.prigge@metro.us

As a kid, Emma Stone was a regular at her local youth theaters. But it wasn't until Stone's 2014-15 Broadway stint as Sally Bowles in "Cabaret" that the actress really got to show the whole world her stuff. Now she's in "La La Land," an old-fashioned musical movie that reunites her for the third time with Ryan Gosling. The two play struggling Angelenos who fall in love while hoofing and crooning up a storm.

What was your favorite role you had as a musical theater kid?

I was in a lot of stuff. A truly beloved musical for me that not a lot of people know is "Titanic," the musical. It was on Broadway for less than a year [in 1997]. The only person I know who is equally obsessed with it is Jesse Eisenberg. I was in that at my local youth theater. I was Stewardess Robinson, who survived at the end. But I've never gotten to play my dream role — well, that was Sally Bowles in "Cabaret." But I haven't gotten to play my other, deep, deep-down dream role, which is Lucy in "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown." [Laughs]

You did "La La Land" shortly after your "Cabaret" stint. Did that make it easier or harder?

It was kind of both. When [director Damien Chazelle] was first talking to me about it, I was sick as a dog in "Cabaret." He had come to see me and I was on all this cold medicine. I was so hopped up I didn't even know where I was, but I was on stage. I was like, "You realize I'm dying here, right? I'm so sick and I have no voice. How are we even talking about a musical?" Even though I was having the time of my life during "Cabaret." It was my favorite experience I've had as an actor, hands-down. But the idea of doing it again, for months and months, and on-screen and it will last forever — that was really overwhelming.

I didn't know you were sick on "Cabaret."

Oh my God, I got sick so many times. Oh my Lord.

How does one power through a Broadway run while on death's door?

Alan Cumming [her

"Cabaret" co-star] was like, "Darling, I'm very worried about you. You need to become a vegan." I was like, "I need to become a vegan right now? What is going on?" [Laughs] I was always sick and he was eating flour or whatever. But it also taught me to go easier on myself as an actor. I'm incredibly hard on myself. And there's not really much you can do when you are completely sick and the show must go on.

Was there something on "La La Land" that was particularly difficult — a number, possibly?
Rehearsing the duet [between her and Gosling, near Griffith Observatory] was fun and took a long time. It was one take, on the hill, dancing together. We would go to Griffith on the weekend to rehearse on that hill. It felt really good when we got it.

Did you guys have a take that was perfect and then someone screwed one little thing up?

There was one that was really good and then I fell off the bench. I was like, "F—! We have to do it again?"

I hope you didn't hurt yourself.

No, I was fine, thank you for being so concerned.

I guess you can survive anything after doing "Cabaret."

Yes, exactly. I was sick on stage, I can make it through anything.

Tony Williams with the three ballerinas who will play Clarice in this season's "Urban Nutcracker." DEREK KOUYOUNJIAN

Heart, soul and healing

The tragic events of Sept. 11 loomed over the first season of Tony Williams' "The Urban Nutcracker," and the artistic director debated if he should even move forward with his holiday production at all.

"Opening night was two months after 9/11, and a friend said to me, 'Is this really a good time for you to be debuting this show?'" remembers the former Boston Ballet dancer and founder of the Tony Williams Dance Center in Jamaica Plain. "I really thought about it, but somehow it felt like the right thing to do. We did three soldout shows, and people had electric responses. I think maybe it had to do with the experiences we had gone through, the aftermath."

Williams — like many of the artists and creators we've spoken to in the months following the election — hope their art provides healing qualities, even for him.

"I'm fortunate to have the opportunity to say, 'Let's go rehearse, and forget about the election for a little while,'" he says. "Time does heal, but for me, I'm lucky to have young people in my cast and classes who aren't thinking about the aftermath, and the blueness of the world. They're thinking about having a good time. Being around this youthfulness has helped me heal anything I've been feeling about this election."

With the "Urban Nutcracker" now in its 16th season, Williams' production has grown and evolved, while keeping stylistic ethos from that first 2001 season: a city backdrop inspired by Boston with Duke Ellington's "Nutcracker Suite" driving the beat for a diverse range of dancers.

In addition to a new prologue scene featuring Georgian folk dancers, this season's "Urban Nutcracker" will include new cityscape drops by set designer Janie Howland and a swanky new throne for Clarice that will make its audience-side debut in act two. Each year, planning for tweaks and additions begins just as the season prior ends. "It's a 12-month cycle," Williams explains. "There's loose planning and a postmortem in January, then in spring things start to ramp up."

Auditions begin in September, and while the "Urban Nutcracker" boasts a more diverse cast than many other dance productions in town, Williams is quick to call it a happy coincidence.

"We don't have a quota system—it's an organic decision. It's not like, 'Let's pick a black kid here and an Asian-American here. It's not like that all,'" he says. "It's very fluid, but we're also receptive to folks coming to [our] school because they feel comfortable in a racially diverse school. You see kids in our classroom, and it's like the U.N."

On the other hand, Williams, who was the first African-American principal dancer at the Boston Ballet, is also focused on providing opportunities for minority dancers and plans to establish an apprentice program for female students of color. "You don't tend to see many women of color in Boston shows, on point, in tutus," he says. "You see men, but I think Boston is behind in representation of people in color in dance in particular." "THE JUNGLE BOOK" NETFLIX INSTANT

Neel Sethi, seen with the Bill Murray-voiced Baloo the Bear, is one of the only humans in Jon Favreau's remake of "The Jungle Book." DISNEY Disney's new bag is remaking its animated classics as live-action romps. So far, so good, even if they've been a bit pointless; last year's "Cinderella" was perfectly fine if a little too close to the original, coming far short of a bold new vision. Jon Favreau's lavish redo of "The Jungle Book," meanwhile, has the perk of tackling a title that's not one of its best (even if it was the last feature Walt Disney oversaw before his death). Part of Favreau's job involves fixing some bugs in the original, smoothing out a source that's a bit too episodic. He's still perhaps not quite the visionary a movie of this scale requires, but maybe that's a good thing: His talents aren't in spectacle but in people, and even a movie with 95 percent critters has a lived-in, character-driven feel. What he's made isn't exactly essential, but it is charming.

"WHITE GIRL" NETFLIX INSTANT

Morgan Saylor (with Brian "Sene" Marc) in "White Girl" FILMRISE

Her name is Leah (played by Morgan Saylor), and she is indeed white (and privileged). She drops into slowly gentrifying Ridgewood, Queens, with a week before school starts, and doesn't waste time hoovering up drinks and drugs, letting her boss (Justin Bartha) do her on his desk and getting involved in local low-rent crime. Sounds like the sequel to "Kids," no? But Elizabeth Wood's semi-autobiographical drama is more observational than alarmist. Leah can always be counted on to make bad decisions, but you won't walk away simply worrying about the kids these days. It's more complex and more empathetic than the title lets on.

"ANOTHER WOMAN"

FILMSTRUCK

Gena Rowlands in 1988's "Another Woman" MGM

In 1978, Woody Allen shocked the world: He made his first serious movie. "Annie Hall" was partly serious, at least compared to the silly comedies he'd made before. But "Interiors" was heavy. There were no jokes — just nods to Ingmar Bergman that weren't funny, as they were just three years earlier in "Love and Death." It's been fashionable to poo-poo Woody's occasional straight-faced dramas as rip-offs of more masterful filmmakers, which they partly were. But the four that just popped up on FilmStruck — under the banner "Serious Woody Allen" — are worthy of reconsideration. Of these (which also includes "Stardust Memories" and "September"), we're the most into "Another Woman," his 1988 drama about a professor (Gena Rowlands) whose stuffy NYC existence is shaken to the core. It contains some of his most lyrical and heartbreaking passages — and, thanks to Gene Hackman, even a joke or two.

Get holiday glam

Whether you're hitting up a swank New Year's Eve party or just hosting at home, we've got the right makeup look for you.

TINA CHADHA
@TinaatMetro
tina.chadha@metro.us

Everyone expects a bold red lip for holiday festivities. But this year, let's make eyes the focus.

"The holidays are a good excuse for people to wear shimmery eyeshadow and be a little more blinging," says Nars makeup stylist Niko Lopez, part of the backstage team that's created Fashion Week looks for designers Marc Jacobs, Alexander Wang, Rodarte and others. He tells us how to pull off the perfect party-ready sultry eye, and then to soften it for a casual soiree at home.

Tone things down for a party at home

If you're hosting a holiday party at your house and you don't want a full-on glam look, Lopez says to tweak the smoky-eye look to the right. Start by prepping the eyes with a little bit of primer or concealer. Line the top of the lash line with a lighter liner, like Nars Witching Hour.

"It's not a full-on black; it's an iridescent charcoal, so it's not intimidating for someone who doesn't wear a lot of makeup," he says. Next, smudge it and add a tiny bit to the lower lash line. Then curl the lashes and add mascara. "Keep it just at that," he says. "You have a little bit of that smoldered effect and focus on the eyes without having all the shadows and textures that look too done up."

With this look he says you can wear a red, berry or neutral lip.

Expert tips

"A lot of women get ready for a party in a bathroom, which has bright lighting," explains Lopez. "And then they get scared because they see a lot of makeup so they tone it down, only to get to the event and look completely natural."

He says to keep in mind that parties are dimly lit — don't shy away from applying enough makeup to make a statement.

Meanwhile, the stylist's pet peeve is going overboard with highlighting or contouring. "You can use the same tech-

Wow them with a smoky eye

The key to a flawless smoky eye is to "blend, blend, blend," stresses Lopez. "I notice when people do a smoky eye it looks blunt on the arch of the eye around the crease." The expert shows us how to avoid this by taking us through his process.

1 Create a blank canvas. "Clear up uneven skintone on the eyelid by applying a little bit of a concealer with a creamy base to it, and set it with powder," says Lopez. But if you have oily lids, he says ditch the concealer for a primer like Nars Pro-Prime Smudge Proof Eyeshadow Base. "That's going to keep your eyeshadow on all day and ensure that it's not going to crease throughout the night."

2 Next, apply a soft neutral shade on the eyelids. Lopez recommends an ash brown with a little gold in it for a slight pop. "Sweep the shadow across the crease of the eye, blending with a fluffy brush," he says.

3 Now for the fun. Add a shimmery shadow across the lid from inner corner to outer corner, blending up to the crease, says Lopez. This season, the makeup artist is loving the charcoal shimmery gray shadow in the new Nars Sarah Moon Eyeshadow palette, Indes Galantes.

4 For a fierce look, Lopez applies a kohl liner (Nars Witching Hour) on the waterline (the inner rim of the eye), as well as on the top and bottom lash line. "Doing the waterline is what's really going to give you that smoldered look," he says, adding, "If someone wants a smoky eye, but not too intense, then I would leave the waterline out."

5 Finish up by curling the lashes and adding two or three coats of mascara.

6 To complete the look, says Lopez, apply a nude blush on the apples of the cheeks and pair with a nude lip.

nique as, say, your favorite beauty bloggers, but with a way lighter hand," says Lopez. To add dimension in a more wearable way he uses Nars Multiple sticks on the cheekbones and blends out to the temples. He then sweeps a bronzer across the hollows of the cheeks up to the forehead.

Your holiday hangover helper

MAKE HEALTHY YOUR NEW HAPPY

Water, water, everywhere.

KATE MOONEY
@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

It's that time of year — holiday parties with open bars, long, wine-heavy dinners with family, raucous nights out on the town with friends. The common denominator? Booze; lots of it. It's a time to let loose, but you don't want to waste your hard-earned vacation days worshipping the porcelain goddess (and that will be the first and last hangover-related euphemism in this article, we promise).

We all wish we could drink to our heart's content without any consequences, but that's just not the way it works.

Dr. George F. Koob, the director of the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism breaks it down: "There's no free ride in the brain; if something makes you feel good, it's going to make you feel lousy later when it wears off."

And while we'd love a magic bullet, "there's no one particular [hangover] cure, per se," according to Dr. Stephanie Zeszutek, an ob-gyn and professor at Touro College of Osteopathic Medicine. "I like to say 'management' instead of cure; [treating a hangover] is really managing your dehydration, managing your electrolyte imbalance," she explains.

Koob's general advice: moderation, pacing yourself and knowing your limits.

While that all sounds like common sense — easier said than done. Here are some practical tips to help prevent those difficult mornings after; and if you do slip up, to help you recover.

The night of Hydration, hydration, hydration. Koob recommends drinking plenty of water alongside your alcoholic beverages, or as "drink spacers" in between cocktails — which will also help you with pacing. "By and large, the most overwhelming factor is how much alcohol you take over a short period of time," he says.

Be sure not to drink on an empty stomach, which can increase the rate of intoxication. Nutritionist Keri Gans, author of "The Small Change Diet," recommends starting off the night with a well-balanced meal of protein, healthy fat and fiber, which will help slow down your body's absorption of alcohol.

The morning after

Sorry, but "the hair of the dog" will not help you. "A hangover is basically a mini withdrawal syndrome," Koob explains. In the short term, that bloody mary at brunch might give you the illusion of feeling better — by getting you temporarily drunk again — but it will only make your hangover worse later in the day.

For a headache

Coffee can help relieve a headache; but know that caffeine, like alcohol, is also a diuretic. Make sure to match your cup of joe with ample water to prevent further dehydration, Gans advises.

To help replenish lost electrolytes while you hydrate, Gans names coconut water, Pedialyte and sports drinks, such as Gatorade. To reduce the headache, Dr. Shanna Levine, a primary care physician at Mount Sinai Health Systems, suggests taking 400-600 milligrams of ibuprofen or another nonsteroid anti-inflammatory medicine.

For nausea

Zeszutek recommends freezing ice pops with low-acidic fruit juice (think, apple, carrot, or aloe vera, as opposed to high-citrus orange or grapefruit, which could trigger nausea) as a gentle way to take in fluids and electrolytes. Similarly, sipping on a cool, refreshing smoothie made with banana (high in potassium), apple and yogurt won't shock your system.

On the savory side, Gans recommends chicken soup, which goes down easy while replenishing sodium levels.

If you're feeling OK enough to venture into the terrain of solid foods, keep it bland and simple. Gans recommends eggs (gentle on the stomach) with whole-grain toast (providing an energizing carb boost).

When it comes to mobile intravenous fluid replacement treatments, offered via companies like the Hangover Club, which sends a nurse to hook you up to an electrolyte-rich drip at your home, Levine says they may work as a fast track to hydrating you — if you can afford them (the Hangover Club's in-house treatments start at $199). "Adequate oral intake of calories or fluids is sufficient to treat most hangovers," she says.

That being said, if your hangover lasts longer than 12 to 24 hours — if you find yourself on day two of discomfort and vomiting — then you might need to seek medical attention, says Zeszutek.

ARE PATRIOTS DESTINED FOR STORYBOOK ENDING?

@dannypicard

It's been a crazy year. And the New England Patriots, so far, have survived it all.

First, Tom Brady was suspended the first four games of the regular season. Then, Rob Gronkowski had back surgery and was placed on season-ending injured reserve after a Week 12 win over the New York Jets.

Throughout it all, the Patriots' defense was trying to capture an identity. Tough to do when the heart and soul of that defense — Rob Ninkovich — was suspended the first four games of the year after testing positive for a banned substance. Even tougher to do when you trade your most athletic defensive player — Jamie Collins — after a Week 8 win over the Bills in Buffalo.

And from Jabaal Sheard's healthy scratch to Stephen Gostkowski's sporadic case of the yips to Danny Amendola's ankle injury, New England's season has been the complete opposite of how you'd "draw it up."

Yet, here are the Patriots, setting themselves up for a storybook ending.

At 12-2 through Week 15, the Pats are the No. 1 seed in the AFC. They clinched the division and a first-round bye with Sunday's 16-3 win over the Broncos in Denver. The only teams challenging them for that No. 1 seed in the AFC are the 11-3 Oakland Raiders and the 10-4 Kansas City Chiefs.

First things first, let's take a look at what the Patriots have left. They'll host the 4-10 New York Jets on Christmas Eve. It's a game in which New England opened as a 16-point favorite, and rightfully so. Then, the Patriots finish the regular season on New Year's Day in Miami, against a 9-5 Dolphins team that will most likely be fighting for a playoff spot.

But if the Patriots defeat the Jets in Week 16, then that will be their 10th win in the conference. The Chiefs currently have seven conference wins, which would give New England the tiebreaker over Kansas City, even if Kansas City won their final two games, against Denver and San Diego.

So realistically, the only team challenging the Pats for the top seed is Oakland. But a Patriots win over the Jets and a Raiders loss in either of their final two games — against Indianapolis and Denver — would clinch that No. 1 seed for New England.

Basically, the Patriots control their own destiny. It's looking like the road to the Super Bowl, in the AFC, will go through Gillette Stadium. And that must be driving the rest of the NFL crazy.

How many teams would be able to function like the Patriots did, given the circumstances they faced all season long?

This can be an ugly league, which has never seemed more unpredictable than in 2016. Then, you have the Patriots. Set up for a possible 14-2 season while spending a good amount of time trying to perform under not-so-ideal situations. Those situations being, a suspended quarterback to begin the season, and the loss of one of the most dangerous receivers in football.

The Patriots have the inside track at clinching home-field advantage throughout the playoffs. GETTY IMAGES Still, Bill Belichick found a way. Tom Brady then found a way. The Patriots, like they usually do, found a way.

Now, someone else in the AFC will have to find a way to go into Foxboro and beat Belichick, Brady and an all-of-a-sudden championship-caliber defense in January.

Crazy to think that somebody will be able to do that. Even crazier to think that, after everything that's gone wrong so far for the Patriots in 2016, this script could end with Roger Goodell handing the Lombardi Trophy to Brady in Houston on Feb. 5.

It's been a crazy year. Now, the only thing crazy would be the Patriots not going to the Super Bowl.

Aries You will come up against a roadblock if you try to take on too much or protest against someone who is in control. Focus on making positive personal changes.

Taurus Plan to do something nice for your peers. Your generosity and thoughtfulness will be appreciated. A unique gesture to help someone will bring you satisfaction.

Gemini Stick to what you know, and don't budge even if someone tries to talk you into taking part in something that isn't in your best interest. Avoid joint ventures.

Cancer Spending time at home with your family while getting things ready for end-of-year festivities will put you in a good mood. Share your thoughts and feelings.

Leo A change at home or in your workplace will turn out better than anticipated. Something you want to do for a loved one will result in an emotional reaction.

Virgo Stick to the facts when dealing with controversial matters. Your future may be at stake if you don't adhere to the rules. Industry parties are best handled diplomatically.

Libra Consider positive personal changes you can make. Knowing what you want to achieve next year will help you enjoy the festive season. A trip looks promising.

Scorpio Don't let your emotions take charge when dealing with older relatives. Do what you have to do and don't look back. Your intuition will help you make the right choice.

Sagittarius Find out what everyone else is up to before making a change that could affect others. Once you get the go-ahead, it will make your job and life easier.

Capricorn You'll intuitively know what's best for you and how to go about getting what you want. Don't hesitate when the going is good. Make your move and don't look back.

Aquarius You need to take care of incomplete financial matters. Making a donation to a charity or cause is fine, as long as you don't go into debt to help others.

Pisces Don't get too serious. Get into the spirit of the season and be grateful for what you have. Take a moment to reflect on what transpired this year. EUGENIA LAST
